Any student desiring to take less than 31 hours during the first year or fewer than 10 hours during any subsequent semester must receive advance approval from the law faculty, unless the student in the last semester of enrollment and needs less than 10 hours for graduation. Such approval is only available if students have satisfied the six-semester residency requirement as stated above.

Transfer course work completed with a grade of "C" or better will be credited toward the Juris Doctor degree. The School of Law will accept up to 30 transfer hours.

Advising

The law registrar regularly advises students, and some law faculty participate in this process as well, especially during priority registration. The school of law does not require academic advising.

Selecting and Changing Majors

There are no majors in law study, although students may obtain a Concentration in Criminal Law, which is designed to provide students with broad-based exposure to concepts, topics and skills vital to criminal law practitioners and to prepare students for careers in criminal law; and/or a Concentration in Remote Sensing, Air and Space Law, which provides students with specialized study in the fields of remote sensing, air and space law and to prepare students for careers in federal and international law and technology-related areas.

Honor Code Policy

Law students must abide by the honor code of the School of Law, which governs the professional conduct of law students during their academic study. The code is administered by the Honor Council, which investigates the matter and conducts a hearing, if necessary.
