

Mgmt 485: Selection and Placement Management

Theory and application of selection processes for organizational staffing. Topics include technical issues such as validity and reliability, job analysis, and workforce planning. Legal issues related to selection are examined, such as equal employment opportunity and affirmative action. Practical issues related to attracting, developing, motivating, and retaining applicants and employees are studied. Additionally, internal and external labor markets are explored, talent management, the use of references checking, and the benefits of HR planning. Recruiting and managing a diverse workforce is also addressed.
